Comment : Today, I want to talk about an important issue that affects people in our county jail and their families . This isn't just about one person who got hurt; it's about how the individuals inside those walls are being treated. Recently, there was a man who got jumped by multiple inmates. His family wanted to know what happened to him, but they couldn't get any answers. They had to play 20 questions, just to find out any. So why is your process of notifying families so lax? This shouldn't happen to any family! We need to think about why it's okay to keep important information from people who care. Imagine if it was your mom, dad, brother, or sister who was hurting or dying . You would want to know everything right away. Many families have gone

Comment : Clearly there is no clear communication. So I ask again why is the process of notifying families ONLY IN A LIFE OR DEATH SITUATION. Did we follow that process in Mr. Otto's case?! We can't ignore this problem. There has to be a better way to communicate these things to the families. It should not take days upon days to hear someone's loved one has been transferred to a hospital. I feel 24-48 is a reasonable ask! A day to let me someone's family know that they are in the hospital! every family deserves to know what's happening to their loved ones. I'm not speaking just for some people, but for everyone in ACJ!

Comment : I am an independent, court-appointed expert doing mitigation work for trial prep and sentencing advocacy, and recently the ACJ has banned incarcerated people from bringing paper work to legal visits. This makes it impossible for the incarcerated people to assist in their defense and essentially deprives them of due process.
